According to this, my income is above average. It beats me how the others are getting along. I wonder what the poor people are doing tonight?

Victoria's average income stands 14th in the list of Canadian cities. We are sandwiched between Vancouver, whose taxpayers have an average income of $3,508; and Hamilton, $3,489.

The hreadwinners of Trail-Rossland drag home an average pay packet of $3,853 a year, which is the highest in Canada.

The next 13, in order, are Sarnia, Sault Ste. Marie, Sudbury, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Calgary, Montreal, Toronto, Windsor, St. Thomas, Oshawa, Vancouver and Victoria.

The national capital ranks 19th. Ottawa's average income is only $3,455.

At the tail end of the 57-city list are Saint John, N.B.; Cornwall, Ont.; Drummondville, P.Q.; Valleyfield, P.Q., and Hull, P.Q. Bottom-place Hull has an average income of $2,864.

The average Victorian taxpayer pays income ax of $338 a year, which happens to be exactly the national average. However, it is much less than the average tax paid by a number of cities farther down the list.

Toronto's average tax of $424 is the largest.

One of the big problems in the planting up of a perennial border is to get the display over the whole season—to have some plants just coming in to bloom as their neighbors are passing out of flower, so there are no drab periods at any time.

This is a good time of the year to review mentally the performance your border put up this year. If the display was under par during any particular months, now is the time to put it right.

bank teller called a bandit's bluff here Wednesday and thwarted a holdup at the main downtown branch of the Imperial Bank of Canada.

Mrs. Barbara Wood said it was the third time she had been threatened by bank robbers.

A tall, unmasked man of about 22 pushed a note across to her. It read: "This is a holdup. Don't press the alarm. I've got a gun."

"Show me the gun." demanded Mrs. Wood. The bandit fumbled in his pocket, lost his nerve and fled, "It's a holdup," Mrs. Wood screamed.

About five employees vaulted counters and were joined in the chase by several customers.

The fleeing figure was soon fost in thick crowds.

An Unrealistic Step

SOVIET Russia's flat rejection of Allied proposals for the reunification of Germany through free elections in both parts many through free elections in both parts has brought the foreign ministers' conference at Geneva to a stubborn stalemate; one in which the spirit of Geneva seems to be sadily lacking. As outlined by Mr. Molotov, the only Germany which would please Moscow would be a divided one or a nation under complete Communist confrol. While Soviet motives are seldom single, if this is a further attempt to break up security moves in Europe and the North Atlantic treaty alliance by indirection it is not a realistic step. The first consequence of Russia's reunification veto may be a fuller determination by Germans may be a fuller determination by Germans to get together; and that desire will oper-ate on both sides of the dividing line in West and East Germany.

For another key reason the Molotov pronouncement is unrealistic, however much it may have been dictated by policy makers at the Kremlin. For here in essence is an uncompromising stand; the repeated refusal to consider practical means of lessening tension in Europe; and once more the assertion of Soviet desire to dominate others. On that count, quite apart from the reaction in Germany and Allied concern over NATO roots, Russia will find most nations in the world against its attitude. Domination in any form is the last thing to sit well with any part of the world. It is the one stimulus which is responsible at heart for any and all forms of revolt current today.

Whatever its motive in the present instance, Soviet Russia has taken a stand on a line that will be difficult to retreat from and almost impossible to maintain in a re-awakening Furope. The very assertion that Russia's sims in Germany are division and eventual control will shatter any remaining illusions as to "neutrality" in the Soviet Rashion. Clearly there can be none. The security that Europe is seeking must come in one form or another, but obviously without Russia's help.

The conference of forcing mixing the service of the security mixing the services of the services are serviced in the services of the services and the services of the servi

The conference of foreign ministers is The conference of foreign ministers is continuing in the shadow of what had been until this week brighter prospects. It is difficult to imagine what progress can be made in the light this point-blank refusal to consider European problems from any other angle than that of Sovietized East Germany and its sponsors. But even if nothing more results from the meetings, the free world needs no second warning. Mr. Molotov's words have been plain enough; the intent to reason is not plain enough; the intent to reason is not

In principle Highways Minister Gaglardi's division of the province into four highways compartments, each with its own regional office for supervisory pur-poses, is a sound move. The province is far too big and diversified for its road system to be administered efficiently and without time loss from a headquarters, and decentralization of engineering control should make for better management all round. Policy will continue to be decided in the provincial capital, as it should be, but the ministerial and central administrative offices will not be cluttered up with routine matters which can best be dealt with closer to the areas con-

In practice, however, the new system has one weakness which various public and semi-public organizations interested in highway construction and maintenance have been quick to spot. Under it the Vancouver Island highways network will come under the control of the Vancouver regional office, which is neither logical nor convenient. The delineation of the four highways districts on the mainland appears to conform to geographical and settlement factors; but on all accounts there should be a fifth district for the

The Vancouver regional office will The Vancouver regional office will have furisdiction over a vast territory taking in the Fraser Valley as far east an Chilliwack and extending northward to the remote district of Atlin and the Yukon boundary. It thus will have more than enough to supervise without responsibility for Vancouver Island as well. Aside from that, the Island's network comprises an entirely separate highways system connected with the mainland only by ferry nected with the mainland only by ferry links. Geographically and on the basis of population concentrations the Island is big enough and important enough to have a separate administrative component.

Apart from year-round considerations, last week's storm damage alone should be sufficient to show the advisability of removing supervision on the Island from the Vancouver office. While Victoria interests no doubt would be loath to see a lifth regional office set up anywhere but in the capital, common sense would suggest Nanaimo as the most central location for one.

A Sporting Gesture

WHATEVER the merits or demerits of the Social Credit government at least it is not afraid to break fresh ground. A neat case in point is the substantial grant it has made to enable the Oak Bay Drakes football club to travel to Fort William to compete for the Western Canada intermediate championship. Even though the government previously showed its sym-pathetic interest in sport by contributing last year to the British Empire Games in last year to the British Empire Games in Vancouver, this action is in the nature of a precedent; direct financial help to a particular club. It is a precedent of some note, also, for governments in this country do not readily list sports among their benefactions. In contrast the governments of some other countries, perhaps anxious to pay more than lip service to games as a helpful factor in national life, do-not-suffer from inhibition in this regard.

The provincial secretary says frankly The provincial secretary says trainely that it is not government policy to subsidize sports in general but in this case the Oak Bay club is representing the whole of B.C. in the Western championship playoff—perhaps later the national playoff. That is warrant enough for a straightforward course that indicates some pride in provincial prestige. These are not highly commercialized professional footballers but workaday players with little financial backing; the game to them in what counts and not personal emolu-ments. They deserve the official encour-agement that has come their way.

It may be said that the Socred govern-ment is inviting like requests for aid in future, since it can scarcely make fish of one sporting endeavour and fowl of an-other. Doubtless other B.C. club cham-pions seeking higher Canadian honors in pions seeking higher Canadian honors in some sport will note the precedent and hope to benefit by it. Other than sporting circles may also sense an opportunity for help when carrying the honor of B.C. in wider fields. That will be for later decision, with each case to be dealt with on its merits. The government has made a notable departure in demonstrating it is anxious to lend a helping hand where possible. In the past this has not been too conspicuous an attitude in government circles, even when the good name of the province was at stake. As for the Oak Bay Drakes club itself we wish it well in what is a difficult sporting quest. what is a difficult sporting quest

Molotov Drops the Mask

By J. M. ROBERTS Associated Press News Analyst

THE world now has returned to an atmo-sphere of even greater foreboding and tendent than existed before this year's two big peace conferences at Geneva.

Subtletv At Geneva

By O. M. ANDERSON

BONN America's military com-D mand in Europe news.
the primary aim of Soviet diplomacy and in subsequent conferat Geneva and in subsequent confer-ences is to devise a formula for hobbling U.S. nuclear weapon strength on this side of the Atlantic.

Soviets are interested in a legitimate lessening of international tension. They do believe the Russians are enormously concerned with the less sening of one particular form of tension: that produced in Russia by the presence of the powerful Ameri-can atomic forces ringing the Soviet state.

It is not the outright ban on nuclear weapons demanded by Russia that alarms the military. The Soviets have no chance of achieving this on terms they would accept. It is the climate of opinion toward nuclear arens that the Soviets are laboring

The military fears that the Sovieta are using Geneva and other inter-national gatherings as propaganda forums in a campaign to disarm the United States.

* * * The trouble with disarmament talk, from the point of view of the millitary, is that world opinion gets a lopsided picture—the political pic-ture. But rarely does the world pubhe get the technical information so badly needed to draw the political negotiations into intelligent perspective.

In this respect the present negotlations on disarmment are mure critical than they have ever been since the invention of gunpowder.

The United States forces on the Continent now exist as the world's first and only atomic armed forces, Nuclear weapons have been inte grated into their structure past the "point of no return." To put it simply, any curtailment of their ability to employ nuclear weapons would destroy their value as a fight

Strategy, tactics and organization of the American ground and air forces in Europe are keyed to the use of nuclear arms, and the process has been carried to the point where the atomic weapons no longer can be separated from conventional arms. Without the employment of nuclear weapons, the American forces—and NATO—have no hope of being able to halt or even appropriately along able to halt or even appreciably slow a Soviet march to the English Chan nel. With nuclear arms, they could make the Soviet invasion of Western Europe too costly a process for the Soviets to contemplate in their pres-ent stage of economic and military development.

The Soviet forces, on the other hand, are believed to possess certain nuclear weapons and to be getting more. But the best intelligence data available here indicate that Russia is well behind the United States in the organization of nuclear fighting

Russia is still primarily a conventional military power. The Soviet forces are being modernized and their mobility increased, but, so far as can be judged, they still possess essen-tially the same strength and weak-ness of the Second World War. It is the belief of most military men that nuclear ground and tactical air forces count for more just now in the defence of Western Europe than strategic bombers carrying atomic and hydrogen bombs.

There are many types of wars, as the Korean war and the "brush wars" the free world have been waging against the Communists since the Second World War demonstrate. The theory of the "big war or no war" is, in the opinion of many West-ern military leaders, a tenuous theory upon which to base the defence of Europe.

To achieve what may be their real purpose in the current disarmament talks, the Soviets need not obtain a flat ban on nuclear weapons. Th can use this demand as a bargaining basis for lesser but demaging concessions by the West.

Soviet aims could be satisfied by agreement on one or more of these points: the atomic-weapon "demili-tarization" of Germany; a freeze on nuclear weapon strength in Ger-many: the prohibition of atomic weapon field manoeuvres and tactical exercises; a ban on the storage of atomic warheads in Europe. * * *

The most faffling point to the terana of, past disarmament neg tistions among Western European military leaders is why any great effort at all should be made purely toward disarmament at present

It seems to these skeptics that to discuss disarmament now is to put the cart before the horse. When international tensions have been re laxed and mutual trust has come to prevail among the protagonists, disarmament will proceed, so they argue, as a natural consequence.

These veterans of disarmamenttalks recall the labored and fruitiess disarmament negotiations between the two world wars, including the Kellogg-Briand Pact to outlaw war, the Washington conference of 1921 on naval distrumment, the London naval conference of 1930 and the pro-tracted and futile efforts of the old League of Nations at Geneva to pro-mute disarrament.
